

VINCE EBERT

Comedian
Physicist

Vince Ebert (*1968, Germany) started his stage career as a comedian in 1998 after graduating in physics and working in management consulting and market research.

His several comedy shows like "Physik ist sexy" – Physics is sexy (2004) and "EVOLUTION" (2013) established Vince Ebert as a scientific comedian who can captivate both lay and scientific audiences with his wordplay and humour. Currently, he is touring through Germany, Austria and Switzerland with his new show "Zukunft is the Future" (2016). Since 2018, Vince Ebert presents his first English show called "Sexy Science. Serious Humour – Made in Germany" in the English Theatre in Frankfurt.

Moreover, has been hosting his own science show on German television for 5 years. His books have sold over 500.000 copies and were listed on bestseller rankings for many weeks.

Furthermore, Vince Ebert gives keynote speeches in English and German for international corporations like Commerzbank, Philips Lighting, PricewaterhouseCoopers, Media-Saturn or BASF for many years.

Whether as a comedian, author or speaker, Vince Ebert's mission is to convey scientific contexts with the laws of humour.

Topics (Selection):

- Big Dadaism - Mastering digitalization with a clear mind
- Randomly Successful - The world is not predictable!